Outlook

It has been an exciting 12 months with the S&P/ASX 300 Index again generating very strong returns. While many Australian investors continue to search for yield and income, the focus from investors during FY2018 was skewed towards companies who provided growth. However, when investors chase growth, increase risk and begin to pay high multiples for companies, markets can become volatile.

Traditionally we are happy with stable markets; however, when you get moments of large volatility it can prove to be a great opportunity for long-term investors. This volatility could remain into the FY2019 year with the Royal Commission into the Australian banking system shaking up the financial services industry, while the debate surrounding imputation credits sends shivers down the spine of any Australian who invests in dividend paying companies.

Despite the chase for growth seen in this past year, we are confident that continuing low interest rates will discourage investors from investing in cash products. This situation will continue to encourage investors into equity markets and in particular into stocks that are offering attractive and sustainable dividend yields.

The half-yearly reporting season ended with the good quality companies delivering stronger than expected results and company guidance that reflected more buoyant market conditions. Capital management initiatives were also front of mind, with many management teams having the confidence to focus on investing for the future. Announcements of share buybacks, acquisitions and general business investment have been driven by stronger balance sheets, strong cash flows and improved operational certainty. For long-term investors this is certainly a welcome change from achieving earnings growth simply through cost out programs.

The recent entitlement offer has placed the BKI portfolio in a very strong position. Cash represents approximately 16% of the portfolio and BKI has no debt, meaning our shareholders are not asked to fund financing costs. We will continue deploying further funds into the market to ensure BKI achieves its goals of investing for the long term in profitable, high yielding, well managed companies that ultimately deliver wealth for BKI shareholders, through an increasing fully franked dividend and capital growth.
